ABSTRACT

This directory informs Latino youth about the various scholarship, internship, and fellowship programs available to them. While scholarship awards help students obtain a college education, fellowship and internship programs enable Latino students and young professionals to build and develop their leadership and analytical skills. Seventy-five scholarship programs are listed alphabetically. Each listing contains a brief program description and contact information. Internships are broken down into Washington, DC; regional; and summer. Fellowships are presented in the categories of Washington, DC; regional; and abroad. A brief program description and contact information accompany each listing. Recipients of the Congressional Hispanic Caucus Institute (CHCI) scholarships, summer internships, and fellowships are pictured. Appendices present a sample application request letter and advice on winning scholarships, landing internships, writing essays, and building the perfect resume. Listings for the top 25 colleges and universities for Hispanics contain contact information and basic information such as school type, application deadline, tuition, numbers of students, and percent Hispanic students. The 168 Hispanic-serving institutions comprising the Hispanic Association of Colleges and Universities are listed. Forty-seven online and print educational resources are also presented. (Contains information about the CHCI and an index.) (TD)

Message from CHCI

The Congressional Hispanic Caucus Institute (CHCI) is proud to present the 2002 National Directory of Scholarships, Internships, and Fellowships for Latino Youth. The Directory includes useful information for Latino students and young professionals wishing to finance their higher education and/or enhance their educational and professional experience with leadership development opportunities.

The purpose of the Directory is to inform Latino youth about the various scholarship, internship, and fellowship programs available to them. Latinos are the youngest and fastest growing group in the United States. CHCI believes it is crucial for Latino youth to take advantage of such educational opportunities and prepare themselves to assume positions of leadership. While scholarship awards assist students obtain a college education, fellowship and internship programs enable Latino students and young professionals to build and develop their leadership and analytical skills. Such programs expose Latinos to a myriad of academic and professional experiences, ultimately preparing them to be future leaders in their respective communities.

The tremendous success of the first edition of the Directory, published last year with the help of the CHCI Alumni Association, illustrates the overwhelming need that exists within the Latino community for information on such programs. Given such need, CHCI worked diligently to increase the number of scholarship, internship, and fellowship listings in this second edition. In addition, the 2002 edition contains useful resources for students looking for the right college, applying for a scholarship, or seeking an internship. However, this directory should not be viewed as the definitive source of scholarships, internships, and fellowships for Latino students. We encourage you to use other sources to assist you in locating the scholarship, internship, or fellowship that best matches your interests.

For more information on the Directory and other CHCI publications, programs, and services, visit our website at www.chci.org or call us toll free at 1-800-EXCEL-DC. We wish you the best in your educational and professional endeavors.

Statistics on Latinos and Education

- Hispanics are the largest minority group in the United States. According to the 2000 Census, there are 35.3 (12.5 percent) million Latinos living in the U. S. It is expected that by 2050, Hispanics will represent approximately 25 percent of the total U.S. population.

- Hispanics are the youngest population group in the United States. One-third of Hispanics are under 18 years of age, and they represent approximately 15 percent of the K–12 population.

- Recent U.S. Department of Education data shows that Hispanic students are doing well in some academic areas, including computer science, foreign languages, and English. In addition, Hispanic student enrollment in college preparatory and academic programs has increased. However, only 57 percent of Hispanics 25 years and older have completed high school or more. Twenty-seven percent of Latinos have less than a high school education.

- In post-secondary education, Hispanic enrollment and completion rates have increased substantially over the last 20 years. Hispanic enrollment in undergraduate education increased by nearly 50 percent between 1990 (782,000) and 1996 (1.3 million).

- However, Latinos continue to be underrepresented in higher education. According to the 2000 Census, only 10.6 percent of Hispanics have attained a bachelor's degree or more. Today, Hispanics make up about 15 percent of the traditional college-age population. It is estimated that by the year 2025, Hispanics will make up 22 percent. In 1996, Latinos represented only 4 percent of students in graduate school and approximately 8 percent of first-year professional students.

- According to a recent study by the Educational Testing Service (ETS), by the year 2015 one million more Hispanic students will be academically prepared to attend college. In 2006, Hispanic undergraduates will outnumber African American undergraduates for the first time. Latinos will be the largest minority group attending college in the country.

- In the past 20 years, Hispanic women have surpassed Hispanic men in graduate enrollment. In 1996, 60 percent of Latinos enrolled in graduate study were women, compared to 40 percent of men.

- Very few Hispanics are attaining graduate degrees and entering their fields of study as academic professors. In 1992, less than 3 percent of full time instructional faculty and staff in higher education were of Hispanic descent.

- Hispanics enrolled in Masters programs receive less grant aid and work more than either white or black students. In 1995-96, only about 20% of Hispanic students received grants, compared to over 30% of both white and black students.

Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund (MALDEF)/Univision-Communications Scholarship

With a generous grant from the Univision Television Group, Inc., MALDEF is able to promote the advancement of Latinos in the field of communications. The Latino community has long been severely underrepresented in the field of communications. Consequently, media images of Latinos are often negative and stereotypical, and their contributions to American society remain virtually invisible. For these reasons, Univision, the nation's largest Spanish-language television company, has joined with MALDEF to create a scholarship that will enable Latinos to pursue careers in this important field. Communications scholarships are awarded to students pursuing a graduate or professional degree in the field of communications, including print and broadcast journalism, or electronic communications. Scholarships range from $2,000 to $6,000.

White House Fellows Program

The White House Fellows Program offers outstanding young Americans the opportunity to participate in the day-to-day business of governing the nation. Fellows spend a year as full-time, paid assistants to senior White House staff, the Vice President, Cabinet officers and other top-ranking government officials. Typically, fellows write speeches, help draft and review proposed legislation, answer congressional inquiries, chair meetings, and conduct briefings. In addition, they participate in an education program designed to nurture their development as leaders. Over the course of the year, each class of fellows meets with Supreme Court Justices, Cabinet Secretaries, senior White House officials, Members of Congress, military leaders, foreign heads of state, and leaders from the worlds of business, the arts, science and technology, and media. Fellows also travel throughout the country and abroad to see U.S. policy in action, learn about other cultures, and see the U.S. and federal government from differing points of view. Fellows receive a salary (approximately $74,000) and benefits like other government employees.

Women's Research and Education Institute (WREI)-Congresssional Fellowship on Women and Public Policy

The Women's Research and Education Institute awards annual fellowships to a select number of graduate students with a proven commitment to equity for women. The fellowship program is designed to encourage (1) more effective participation of women in the formulation of policy options, (2) better understanding of how policies affect women and men differently, and (3) greater appreciation of the fact that issues often defined as "women's issues" are really of equal importance to men. WREI Fellows gain practical policymaking experience and graduate credit as they work for one academic year as congressional legislative aides in Washington, DC. Fellows are selected on the basis of academic competence and their demonstrated interest in the public policy process. They are expected to be articulate, adaptable, and have strong writing skills. Only students who are currently in, or have recently completed, a master's or doctoral program at an accredited institution in the United States are eligible. Fellows receive stipends for tuition and living expenses.

Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation-Woodrow Wilson Visiting Fellows Program

The Woodrow Wilson Visiting Fellows program was established to encourage the flow of ideas between the academic and non-academic sectors of society, and to connect a liberal education with the world beyond the campus. The Foundation matches the interests of the colleges with the experience and availability of the fellows, helping the colleges design a week-long program of classroom visits, lectures, panels, seminars, workshops, and informal discussions. Fellows are representatives of various professions and spend a week or more on the campuses of small liberal arts colleges helping students and teachers relate education to the needs of American society. Through classes, seminars, and informal discussions, executives of major corporations, diplomats, journalists, and others create better understanding between the academic and non-academic worlds.

CDS International, Inc.-Robert Bosch Foundation Fellowship Program

As the countries of the world become more interdependent, the Robert Bosch Foundation Fellowship Program recognizes the importance of familiarizing American professionals with the political, economic, and cultural environment of Europe in general and of the Federal Republic of Germany in particular. To further this goal, and to strengthen the ties of friendship and understanding between the United States and Germany, the Foundation sponsors a fellowship program which enables young American professionals to participate in an intensive work and study program in Germany. The program strives to provide young American professionals (ages 23–34) with executive-level internships in the federal government and private sectors in Germany. Seminars in Berlin, Paris, Strasbourg and Brussels provide a meaningful understanding of issues facing the European Union and Germany today. Candidates are competitively chosen from the fields of business administration, economics, journalism and mass communications, law, political science, and public affairs/public policy.

Sample Application Request Letter

July 30, 2001

(Scholarship/Internship/Fellowship) Coordinator
Congressional Hispanic Caucus Institute
504 C Street, NE
Washington, DC 20002

Dear (Scholarship/Internship/Fellowship) Coordinator:

I recently learned of the (scholarship/internship/fellowship) offered by your organization. I believe I would make an ideal candidate. Please send me an application and any other information pertaining to the (scholarship/internship/fellowship). I have enclosed a self-addressed stamped envelope for your convenience. Thank you for your assistance. I look forward to receiving the requested paperwork.

Sincerely,

(your signature)

Top Ten Tips for Winning Scholarship Applications

1. Apply only if you are eligible. Read all the scholarship requirements and directions carefully. Make sure you are eligible before you send in your application.

2. Complete the application in full. If a question does not apply to you, note that on the application. Do not leave a question blank. Be sure to supply all additional supporting materials, including transcripts, letters of recommendation, and essays.

3. Follow directions. Provide everything that is required. However, do not supply things that are not requested—you could be disqualified.

4. Neatness counts. Always type your application, or if you must print do so neatly and legibly. Make a couple of photocopies of all the forms before you fill them out. Use the copies as working drafts as you develop your application packet.

5. Write an essay that makes a strong impression. The key to writing a strong essay is to be personal and specific. Include concrete details to make your experience come alive: the who, what, where, and when of your topic. The simplest experience can be monumental if you honestly present how you were affected.

6. Watch all deadlines. To help keep yourself on track, impose your own deadline that is at least two weeks prior to the official deadline. Use the buffer time to make sure everything is ready by the deadline. Do not rely on extensions—very few scholarship providers allow them.

7. Make sure your application gets where it needs to go. Put your name (and Social Security number, if applicable) on all pages of the application. Pieces of your application may get lost unless they are clearly identified.

8. Keep a back-up file in case anything goes wrong. Before sending the application, make a copy of the entire packet. If your application goes astray, you will be able to reproduce it quickly.

9. Give it a final 'once-over.' Proofread the entire application carefully. Be on the lookout for misspelled words or grammatical errors. Ask a friend, teacher, or parent to proofread it as well.

10. Ask for help if you need it. If you have problems with the application, do not hesitate to call the funding organization.

How to Land an Internship

An internship is not only a great experience; it is also a great way to jump-start your career. But finding the perfect internship takes time and effort.

Time It Right

Finding an internship is not a last-minute project. You need time to research your options, prepare your application, and interview for the position. And if you want college credit for your internship, you will have to work with your school beforehand. So plan ahead and start your search at least three months in advance.

Be Pro-active

Internships will not come to you. It is up to you to find them or, in some cases, create them. But there are a lot of resources to give you a head start. Start with your college. Many companies actively recruit interns on college campuses. To find your leads check out:

- Your department. Industry leaders often contact departments directly to find the best and the brightest.

- The college placement center. Center staff can direct you to resources to help you find promising programs.

The Internet can also provide great leads for internships. Free online databases, such as Internshipprograms.com (www.internshipprograms.com) and Monster.com (www.monster.com), provide information about programs nationwide. And many databases allow you to narrow your search by industry, company, or geography. You can also use the web to learn more about internship opportunities at companies that interest you. Check the company's home page for internship opportunities and contact information for the Human Resources department. Do not worry if you do not find established internship programs that interest you. It can pay to take the initiative and offer your services even if the company does not run a formal program.

Get Moving

Once you have identified a prospective intern program, you need to make contact. If you are applying to a formal internship program, request an application form and submit the required materials as soon as possible. Application requirements often include:

- an application form
- an essay describing your background and goals
- letters of recommendation
- transcripts
- a portfolio of your work

If you are proposing an internship to a company that does not usually hire interns, you may need to work a little harder. Start by identifying the department you would like to work for. Learn what you can about the organization and the department, using online resources such as www.hoovers.com or print media such as newspapers, magazines, and journals. Next, draft a letter of inquiry outlining your interest in the company, your background, and your desire to serve as an intern. Use the letter to demonstrate your knowledge of the organization and the industry by commenting on recent company projects or media coverage. Suggest ways your background could work for the company. Be sure to include your resume and current contact information.

Do Not Just Apply

Landing an internship requires more than just filling out an application. To stand out, you must be able to speak intelligently about the company and your future plans. Do this by researching the company and the industry.

- Visit your career placement office. Counselors should be able to direct you toward corporate resources.
- Ask your college reference librarian about resources for companies in your field such as Infotrac, an electronic database available at most libraries.
- Also check Hoovers Online (www.hoovers.com) for exhaustive information about various companies.

By knowing where to look and how to prepare, you can land a great internship. The opportunities are out there—it is up to you to go out and find them.

How to Write a Five Paragraph Essay

1. Before you begin writing, decide on your answer to the question asked of you. This is your basic thesis.
2. Before you begin writing, decide on what three pieces of evidence/support you will use to prove your thesis.
3. Write your introductory paragraph. Place your thesis along with your three pieces of evidence in order of strength (least to most) at the end of this paragraph.
4. Write the first paragraph of your body. You should begin by restating your thesis, focusing on the support of your first piece of evidence.
5. End your first paragraph with a transitional sentence that leads to paragraph number two.
6. Write paragraph two of the body focusing on your second piece of evidence. Once again make the connection between your thesis and this piece of evidence.
7. End your second paragraph with a transitional sentence that leads to paragraph number three.
8. Write paragraph three of the body focusing on your third piece of evidence. Again, make the connection between your thesis statement and this piece of evidence.
9. Begin your concluding paragraph by restating your thesis. Include the three points you have used to prove your thesis.
10. End your concluding paragraph with a statement of extension which will (hopefully) cause the reader to look beyond what you have written. You do not include new evidence in your last paragraph.

Tips:

1. Never use I or you (unless specifically told that it is allowed).
2. Do not use contractions in formal writing.
3. Organization is one of the most important parts of good writing. Make sure to organize from the first paragraph on.

Writing the Scholarship Essay

- Think before you write. Brainstorm to generate some good ideas and then create an outline to help you get going.
- Be original. The judges may be asked to review hundreds of essays. It is your job to make your essay stand out from the rest. So be creative in your answers.
- Show, do not tell. Use stories, examples, and anecdotes to individualize your essay and demonstrate the point you want to make. By using specifics, you will avoid vagueness and generalities and make a stronger impression.
- Develop a theme. Do not simply list all your achievements. Decide on a theme you want to convey that sums up the impression you want to make. Write about experiences that develop that theme.
- Know your audience. Personal essays are not 'one size fits all.' Write a new essay for each application—one that fits the interests and requirements of that scholarship organization. You are asking to be selected as the representative for that group. The essay is your chance to show how you are the ideal representative.
- Submit an essay that is neat and readable. Make sure your essay is neatly typed, and that there is a lot of 'white space' on the page. Double-space the essay, and provide adequate margins (1"–1½") on all sides.
- Make sure your essay is well written. Proofread carefully, check spelling and grammar. Most importantly, have friends or teachers look over your essay. Another pair of eyes can catch errors you might miss.

Building the Perfect Resume

A good resume is vital. It is your calling card to a prospective employer—one that lays out your qualifications and hopefully gets you a job interview. Remember, most employers will spend less than five minutes initially reviewing your resume. Follow these guidelines to make sure your resume gets you noticed.

Be sure to include these basics:

- Contact information: full name, phone number, school and permanent address, and e-mail address.
- Education: school, degree, date of completion, honors, and special course work. If you are still in school, provide your expected date of completion.
- Experience: In addition to work history, include relevant non-professional experience, such as internships, extracurricular activities, and significant volunteer work.
- Skills: List any computer systems, office equipment, and software programs you are familiar with, as well as particular office skills (shorthand, typing speed, etc.).
- Other Categories: If they are relevant, include publications, awards, leadership positions, or other notable achievements.

There are many different ways to organize your resume. The most basic formats include:

- Chronological: To emphasize your work history, list your jobs and activities, beginning with your most recent experiences.
- Functional: To emphasize your skill sets, group your experiences under categorical headings, such as Leadership or Technology Support.

The key is to pick a format that presents your achievements most effectively—as well as being easy to read and comprehend.

Tips for a Winning Resume:

- Keep it brief. Limit your resume to one page. Instead of paragraphs, use bullet-pointed lists.

- Provide meaningful descriptions of your experiences. When detailing your job history, use short sentences or fragments to demonstrate your relevant experience.

- Use strong action words (“developed and implemented a new filing system”; “created two new membership programs”).

- Use formatting to help you out. Capitalize and use boldface, italics, or underlining to help organize the information.

- Proofread. Use spell-check, double-check your contact information, and make sure your formatting is consistent. Ask a friend or family member to proofread it as well.

- Custom fit your resume. Revise your resume for each job application to make sure it fits the opportunity at hand.

The final test: Take a look at your resume from an arm’s distance. Is it confusing and text-heavy? Or is it easy to find the information you need? Please be sure your resume is reader-friendly.

Top 25 Colleges and Universities for Hispanics

Each year, Hispanic Magazine ranks the best colleges and universities for Latino students. The list includes academic institutions succeeding in recruiting and retaining Hispanic students. The top 25 colleges and universities are selected based on the following criteria: total Hispanic student enrollment (at least 10 percent); number of Latinos graduating; number of Hispanic-related degree programs; number of Hispanic student organizations and minority support programs; and number of Hispanic faculty. Hispanic Magazine also looks at the college's academic excellence as ranked by the U.S. News and World Report's annual listing of America's Best Colleges. For more information, visit Hispanic Magazine's web site, hispanicmagazine.com, and refer to the March 2002 issue.

Top Ten Law Schools for Hispanic Students

Annually, Hispanic Business ranks the top business schools for Latino students. The list, which includes some of the best law schools in the country, is a useful tool for any Latino student wishing to pursue a law degree. The top ten law schools were ranked according to the number of Latino students and faculty, number of Latino social services (including mentorship programs and student organizations), college's retention rate, and program's reputation as assessed in the U.S. News and World Report's Best Graduate Schools, 2002 Edition.

For more information, please visit Hispanic Business's web site, www.hispanicbusiness.com, and refer to the September 2001 issue.

CHCI Mission Statement

The Congressional Hispanic Caucus Institute (CHCI) is a non-profit and non-partisan educational organization established in 1978 by Congressman Edward Roybal, Congressman E. "Kika" de la Garza and Congressman Baltasar Corrada. CHCI's mission is to develop the next generation of Latino leaders by offering educational and leadership development programs, services, and activities that promote the growth of its participants as effective professionals and strong leaders.

CHCI Programs

Fellowship Program
Every year, the nine-month CHCI Fellowship Program offers up to 20 promising Latinos the opportunity to gain hands-on experience at the federal level in the public policy area of their choice while in Washington, DC.

Summer Internship Program
The CHCI Summer Internship Program provides 30 Hispanic undergraduate students the opportunity to spend two months in Washington, DC at a congressional office where they work on constituent communications, monitor hearings, conduct legislative research, and assist with general office operations.

Fellows Alumni Association
The CHCI Fellows Alumni Association represents a group of former CHCI Fellows whose vision is to be a national network of Hispanic professionals and leaders dedicated to the advancement and development of CHCI alumni.

CHCI Educational Services

Scholarship Connection
The CHCI Scholarship Connection (CSC) is a free service designed to help Hispanic students access scholarships and other sources of financial assistance for higher education.

Scholarship Award
The CHCI Scholarship Awards are given to Latino students who have demonstrated strong leadership and a commitment to the Latino community.
